Wax Pod Beans

Round-Pod Kidney Wax

A very popular bean with the Kitchen Gardener, and also Market Gardener. Its productiveness has made it a favorite with a great many planters. Its season is early, and its rust-resistant qualities are very strong. Pkt. 10 cts., lb. 50 cts., 10 lbs. $3.50, 50 lbs. $16.00.

Currie's Rust Proof

This variety is one of the most important of any of the wax-pod beans. It is about as early as any wax variety. The pods are flat, and sometimes grow six or seven inches in length.

Lima Beans

Ford Hook Bush

This bean has been developed into a class of its own. As to type and its money-making possibilities it is the heaviest cropper of any Bush Lima on the market today. It is ready to pick at least two weeks before any pole beans. This makes it a valuable sort for market purposes.

Pkt. 10 cts., lb. 60 cts., 10 lbs. $4.00, 50 lbs. $16.50

Ford's Mammoth (Pole)

This is about the longest pod of any Lima Bean. They are very dark green, about six inches long, flat, and growing about four or five beans of fine quality to the pod.

King of the Garden (Pole)

The vines of this variety are very hardy, although the beans are excellent quality. They do not grow quite as long or wide as the Ford's Mammoth, but on the market they usually demand a much larger price than most flat-podded varieties.

Pkt. 10 cts., lb. 60 cts., 10 lbs. $4.00, 50 lbs. $16.50

Dreer's Improved (Pole)

A stout and vigorous grower, producing pods about four inches long and very thick, containing from three to five beans. They are large, thick and fine quality. They are later in maturing than most Lima Beans.

Early Eclipse

This beet is generally looked upon as the favorite for second early. While some market gardeners use it for first early, it is not as early as Crosby Egyptian. The root is globe shaped and has small tap root. It is a very good variety for trenching purposes.

Pkt. 5 cts., oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 40 cts., lb. \$1.25

Early Lentz

This stock of beet has been grown and selected by a Bucks County Market Gardener. He has gone to considerable trouble and expense to grow this stock of seed for us, and it can now be relied upon to be absolutely true to the type. The color is rather light, quality excellent; in fact, one of the best table beets we know of. It matures very early.

Pkt. 5 cts., oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 40 cts., lb. \$1.25

Pkt. 5 cts., oz. 15 cts., $\frac{1}{4}$ lb. 40 cts., lb. \$1.25

Bastin's Half Long

We have been working for some time to get a first-class stock of this variety, and the result is we now have an excellent stock to offer. This beet is grown principally in and around Philadelphia County for winter or storing purposes. The roots are dark red, very smooth and uniform in shape. The quality of this beet is also very fine. It retains its tenderness longer than most varieties. The tops are rather heavy, making a fine appearance while growing.

Swiss Chard.--- Giant Lucullus

This is a variety of beet grown exclusively for its large tender leaves. Copenhagen Market

The earliest round-head variety ever offered. This variety is known throughout the country, and seems to be in a class by itself. Its heads are very solid and often weighing ten pounds.
